CONCORD, N.H. -- Executive Councilor Andru Volinsky on Wednesday announced the expansion of the more than 175-member exploratory committee by 67 additional members, bringing the total membership to 242 members. Councilor Volinsky's exploratory committee is comprised of community leaders, activists and elected officials from across the state who have expressed their enthusiasm for his priorities of school funding, taking aggressive climate action, enhancing access to health care, and bridging economic inequality. The energy of the original exploratory committee has spread and new members have asked to join. A number of these new members asked to be added at the New Hampshire state party convention held on September 7, 2019.

"Our message is catching on," said Andru Volinsky, "the energy is tremendous around building a movement to help New Hampshire families."

"Andru will make a tremendous New Hampshire governor, not just on his signature issue of education, but on environmental, energy and veterans issues. I am proud to support him," said Carol Shea Porter, former Congresswoman representing New Hampshire's First District.

"Andru has stood with the people of the North Country on issues that matter to us. I am confident that as governor he will stand with all the people of New Hampshire in the same way," said Nancy Martland of Sugar Hill.

Eva Castillo of Manchester said, "So much of activism on behalf of people who need help is about showing up. Andru can be counted on to always show up and much more."

Andru's exploratory committee represents concerned citizens from all ten New Hampshire Counties and from more than 85 New Hampshire's cities and towns.

The full list of Volinsky's expanded exploratory committee is attached.
